A Bear Captured by Chloroform.

A paper published at Montauban, Spain, gives an ecount of the capture of a huge bear, by chloroform, which is somewhat amusing. His bearship had for a ong time been the terror of the district, entirely defyng all attempts at capture. Even the most daring nunters dared not approach him sufficiently near to give him a death wound, and so the bear was left to his glory, making predatory excursions continually among the sheep and cattle of the surrounding farms At length a Dr. Pegot hit upon a plan for securing the monster by the use of chloroform. Early one morning he proceeded to the cave where the bear slept, accompanied by a party of peasants, and having made sure the snow just fallen that the animal was within, ne peasants ran and fastened up the entrance with on hars, which prevented the bear from coming out. ver the bars they stretched blankets to prevent the iness of air, and now, the operation of putting monsieur bear under the influence of chloroform commenced. the doctor took a large syringe, and having filled it with the somnolent li uid, discharged it through an perture in the blanket into the interior of the cave.his being several times repeated, the bear soon fe'l ato a deep sleep, when the doctor marched in and semed his prize triumphant They bore the poor bear way tied limb and limb, keeping a cloth saturated with holoroform constantly at his nose, and took him to the village, where a cage having been prepared, the bear vas permitted to awake. Great excitement followed all round as the capture of the wild beast became known, and crowds came to behold him, secured in his cage. -In the evening the village was illuminated in rejoicing, while the praises of science and Dr. Pegot fell from every lip. This is the first instance of the capture of a wild animal by chloroform.

Well-Ben and his Dulcina made out matters in proper time, without the knowledge or consent of his intended father-in-law. Indeed the old man had never suspected that the aspirations of the youth were tending towards an alliance with his family, and if it had ever occurred to him, he would have spurned the thought. Ben was aware of his aristocratic notions, and of the existence of almost insurmountable objections to the match. So, one day, consulting the ingenuity of his nature, he devised ways and means to bring it about.

Going to the old man, he told him that unfortunately he had conceived a liking for the daughter of a wealthy farmer in the neighborhood-that it was correspondents, in describing a scene in the Senate impossible to gain the consent of the girl's father- says:-Sam Houston sat dressed in dark pantaloons, a that he loved her -- and she loved him; and asked single breasted blue military coat with bright buttons,
